tracting, especially if the side of the face, eye, ear and neck show a tendency toward neuralgia and susceptibility to colds—A. L. N.

Answer: Instead of classifying neuralgia as a disease it should be regarded as a reflex manifestation of a local or general disturbance. Some of the general causes are disturbances that lower resistance such as anemia or such diseases as diabetes, malaria and typhoid fever. Some of the local causes of facial neuralgia are reflex irritations from the eyes, ears, sinus and teeth.

S. V. Mead in his recent book on Oral Surgery states that facial neuralgia may be caused, among other things, by a crowded arch; pressure from malocclusion; secondary dentin; exposed sensitive cementum where gums have receded and impacted and unerupted teeth.

Even though X-ray pictures indicate that the impacted teeth are apparently healthy they may be causing pressure on the nerve; and thus be the causative factor of the neuralgia. In this event, they should be removed.

Vets houses started at Niles excavation

Ground breaking ceremonies for a veteran housing project unque in this country, took place at 10 a. m. Wednesday, July 30, at Oakton and Prospect aven, Niles, Ill. At that time the first shovel of dirt was turned and a housing project for the future community of Coventure, conceived and planned by the G. I. members of Home and Community Planning Association, 112 E. Walton Place. HACPA is a non-profit organization created about a year and a half ago by veterans anxious to build homes for their families in spite of the tremendous difficulties of constructing them through normal commercial channels.

Houses in the project, all single unit dwellings, will be priced from $6,000 to $14,000. Sizes will range from one bedroom to three bedroom homes. According to William Marrero, member of HACPA's architectural firm, quality of construction will far exceed that found in houses of similar price range constructed by speculative builders.

Journal of a Bird Watcher

F. J. FREEMAN

August (1946)—This is the dry month; fields burned up, ponds dried up. How do the birds make out that depend upon a water habitat? No water to catch fish and frogs in, no mud to gurry in for succulent roots and worms, no moisture to sustain water dependent insects. One morning this month the boys were much excited at finding an American bittern in the lot next door to us. Whatever possessed it to come into the village, I have no idea, unless it was in search of water.

August 2nd—Was up at the slough at Prospect Heights today. All of the ponds but one are dried up leaving exposed the skeletons and scales of many good sized carp. The remaining pond was shallow with dryness and packed with carp vainly trying to find cover. They would wiggle along through the mud and water with their backs exposed trying to find a deeper spot. Must be easy picking for the predators.

Saw a large flock of birds feeding on the weed stalks but could not make them out. Their heads were striped brown and yellow, and their bodies showed a good deal of yellow-green with brown stripings. The birds were somewhat sparrow-like in build but larger. They turned out to be bob-o-links in their winter colors. Quite a change from the black and white bird with the cream colored skull cap with which we are familiar.

Bird watching in the fall is much more puzzling than in the spring as there are so many immature birds, and birds like the bob-o-link, which take on different colors. Most bird books just illustrate the birds in their spring colors which is not much help for later color phases.

August 4th. Identified the Carolina wren at the Barrington slough today and saw several species of shore birds. They are the earliest of the fall migrants. Saw a semi-palmated plover at the Deer Grove slough. This bird could be taken for bath this dry month. We have had cardinals, blue jays, goldfinches, indigo buntings as well as other less colorful species using it. Our bird bath is made with about 25c worth of sand and cement smothered out into a shallow basin in a hole scooped in the ground under the apple tree where the shade keeps the water from getting too hot. It is easy to clean—we just sweep it out with a broom—and we don't worry about snow and ice cracking it. The birds seem to like it just as well as if it were the twenty-five dollar one advertised in House and Garden magazine.

August 31st—Peter saw a warbler in the woods today—the first of the bulk of returning migrants. Here they come!

Study new bus line from Barrington to Wauconda, other points

The W.A.F. Transportation Co., Inc., of McHenry, presently operating bus service between Crystal Lake, McHenry, McCullom Lake, Ringwood, Wonder Lake and Woodstock, recently had a hearing by the Illinois Commerce Commission in Chicago on its petition to extend their service to include Barrington, Tower Lake, Wauconda, Sloum Lake, Island Lake, Burton's Mill, Griswold Lake, Oakhurst, Hickory Grove, Emerald Park and Mineral Springs.

Need for public transportation between these points was made evident to the commission by a record crowd of witnesses, headed by Senator Ray Paddock of Wauconda and Representative Harold Kelsey of Barrington. Not only were representatives of all the communities present but also the representatives of industries in Barrington, Woodstock, Crystal Lake and McHenry.
